

RAINES'S BUFF CALED WITH A DEMAND FOR MORE LIBERAL SUNDAY LAWS.

ACTORS IN THE FIGHT FOR AND AGAINST MORE LIBERAL EXCISE LAWS. BISHOP POTTER, who says saloons are necessary. SENATOR RAINES, who wants total abstinence in hotels on Sunday. JULIUS HARBURGER, who wants Sunday Assemblyman Adler, who wants saloons open for a few hours on Sunday.

Legislators Think He Means to Head Off Adverse Amendments.

HE SAYS HE IS SERIOUS.

Two Assemblymen Introduce Bills for Opening Saloons on Sundays.

MESSRS. ADLER AND HARBURGER.

Hotel Men Agree to Fight Any Such Proposition as Raines Outlines and Organize to Oppose It.

Albany, Jan. 17.—The proposed measure of Senator Raines to secure total abstinence on Sundays by passing such an amendment to the present liquor law as will prohibit the sale of drinks even with meals at legitimate hotels and clubs as well as at "fake" establishments was an idea deemed astounding by the legislators who discussed it to-day.

What Senator Raines's real motive is in giving publicity to his alleged intentions seems doubtful. No well informed legislator will admit that the proposition has any chance of passing, and several have assured him-keeping constituents who telegraphed inquiring that no such attack on the hotel keepers would be successful.

The sincerity of Senator Raines is questioned and many believe that his threat to introduce the bill is merely "bluff" masking another purpose. It is believed that the bill will never be introduced, and it certainly has no party support at present.

By many the proposing of the measure is regarded only as an attempt to frighten the liquor interests into acquiescence in the present state of affairs, and to prevent them from their threatened attempt to secure such an amendment as will allow Sunday liquor selling in the cities during certain specified hours.

Sentiment Favors Local Option.

There is a strong sentiment in favor of allowing the cities, and especially the larger ones, to have at least local option in the matter of Sunday liquor selling during certain hours, and it is suggested that it is to check the growth of this sentiment that Senator Raines has announced his new drastic proposition.

Senator Raines, however, insists that he is in grave earnest. He refused, to-day, to discuss the subject at any length, or add to the statement, which was exclusively published in to-day's Journal, except so far as to declare:

"I am still seriously considering the proposition."

Senator Grady, in an interview to-day with the Journal correspondent, severely criticized the measure.

"I do not believe that Senator Raines can have any expectation of amending the present very objectionable law in such a still more objectionable form. The Democratic Senators are ready to meet such an issue without either debate or delay."

"Whatever may have been the purpose of publicly proclaiming his intention to attempt such an amendment before the introduction by him of any bill looking to this end, it would surely be defeated. No hotel-keeper need feel disturbed that this latest assault against his business will be followed by any legislation to carry it into execution."

Simply Fanaticism.

"Whatever may be said of the Governor, either as a partisan or a reformer, it certainly will not be claimed that he is a fanatic; and the legislation proposed is simply fanaticism in its most acute form."

It is understood that the most intelligent constituents in the Western world to a restraint and oppression obtaining in no civilized country or community except where absolute prohibition in the use of liquor is enforced.

Although the people of New York have been patient, it is believed that this pathos can have induced in the minds of many intelligent observers the delusion that they had submitted to the intolerance and the invasion of personal liberty involved in this latest pronouncement of the Senator responsible for the present immoral, dishonest and mischievous excise laws.

That the announcement of the proposed drastic measure of Senator Raines was made to head off any movement for a more open Sunday revealed at least partial proof in the fact that to-day a bill was introduced by Mr. Adler, of New York, prohibiting liquor selling on Sundays, between the hours of 8 and 10 p. m., and the proposal made to-day by Mr. Harburger to allow theatrical performances and baseball games, under certain restrictions, on Sundays.

Adler's Broad Bill.

The new excise bill presented to the House by Mr. Adler is very comprehensive. It adds to the sub-division defining trafficking in liquors the distribution at any banquet, reception, hall or wedding in any rented hall or rented room, $500 in the case of a hall, and $200 in the case of a room. It strikes out that part of the law which provides that there shall be not more than one bar on any licensed premises unless a tax be paid for each one.

It provides a license fee for restaurants where drinks are sold with meals and not with sandwiches of $250 in cities of 1,500,000 population and over, $200 in cities of from 500,000 to 1,500,000, and ranging down to $50 for towns of from 5,000 to 10,000 population.

For the privilege of selling between 12 midnight and 5 a. m. on week days, and from midnight to 5 a. m. on Sundays, an additional scale of license fees is scheduled. For premises containing halls where all night balls and entertainments may be held special permission must be secured.

The vital clause of the bill, is tucked in modestly at the close of the bill, and provides that Sunday liquor selling shall be

Poisoner Almost IN THE POLICE NET

Expert Carvalho Makes Several Startling Discoveries in the Handwriting.

THREE SUSPECTS NOW?

The Police Believe the Principal May Have Had Two Accomplices.

The reason for the refusal of Captain McClusky to permit reproduction in the newspapers of the photographs of the handwriting on the poison package wrapper in the Adams case was made apparent yesterday at the conclusion of a long conference at Headquarters between Handwriting Expert David N. Carvalho and the Chief of Detectives. In other words, the publicity that would be given to the handwriting by extensive exhibition of photographs in the public press is no longer necessary because the police now know who wrote the address on the wrapper.

When Expert Carvalho emerged from Captain McClusky's room yesterday afternoon, after an interview of nearly an hour and a half, he implicitly admitted that an important discovery had been made in the examination of handwritings, and that the end of the case was in sight. Mr. Carvalho was, until Monday, the employ of Mr. Weeks, counsel for Mollioux. Since Monday, however, he has been working for the police. He has been able to supply some very important information which, he said, goes to show that three persons were concerned in the poisoning of Mrs. Adams. There was a rumor around last night, however, that the detectives are looking for two accomplices instead of one, a woman as well as a man. Three persons, it is said, are now suspected of complicity in the crimes which caused the deaths of H. C. Barnett and Mrs. Adams.

Expert Carvalho's Discovery.

It was hinted that the handwritings in the possession of the police had revealed these important facts, and that Expert Carvalho was the first to direct attention to the poison in the wrapper. To-morrow I shall carefully examine these suspicious handwritings and see if the identity of authorship with the original can be established.

"Most of the handwritings turned over to me were quickly disposed of, the majority of them being written by people who absolutely could not have written the address on the wrapper. When handwriting is disguised, if written in a fairly good hand, the writer must have had the ability to write an equally good hand. The aim of the expert is to ascertain the method of the disguise. This I think will be found in the present instance."

"I have also found several examples of handwriting, the author of which by the use of this general method could be discovered. Have written the original superposition. This is a step forward."

"I wish you would also say that from what I know of the case, Captain McClusky has shown marked intelligence and ingenuity in its management. Things are moving very rapidly now, and I think it may safely be said that the case will come to a head very soon."

Police More Confident.

Mr. Carvalho's declaration that the case is a simple one is the first revelation of the police case against the principal suspect and his accomplices or accomplices. In other words, the police are now confident that they will be able to secure the poisoner or poisoners through telltale handwriting. Captain McClusky is only waiting until the expert can say positively that the handwriting on the wrapper is that of the suspect to arrest him at once. This may be but a matter of a few days.

In the meantime the watch over the movements of the suspect and his alleged accomplices will be doubled. He will not be allowed to move without the full knowledge of the police. If he attempts to leave the city he will be stopped and locked up at Headquarters.

Captain McClusky would not say much about his conference with Mr. Carvalho. He did state, however, that Mr. Carvalho had been employed in the poisoning case by the police since last Monday. Captain McClusky again refused to say whether Harry Cornish had given him information which would lead to the apprehension of the poisoner's accomplice.

Excitement at Headquarters.

It is certain that not for many days has Headquarters been so wrought up over the poisoning mystery as it was yesterday. It was noticeable also that Captain McClusky kept a large number of his detectives ready for special orders. Several men were sent flying in many directions, and returned with reports which appeared

PROTECTION FOR THE WORKING MAN

A Bill to Extend the Scope of the Factory Inspection Law.

MEN TO BE BENEFITED.

An Eight-Hour Day and Union Inspectors Proposed in the Sanders Measure.

Albany, Jan. 17.—Assemblyman Leon Sanders, Tammany Democrat, of the Twelfth New York District, in which are a great many working people, introduced to-day, at the request of many of his constituents and of labor bodies, a bill amending the factory inspection laws in many ways.

Under the present law the chief protection of factory inspection is given to women and children. Mr. Sanders proposes to extend the scope of the law so that men will have the protection from careless or too exacting employers that women and children now have.

Another amendment makes all public and private corporate establishments subject to the visits and regulations of the factory inspectors.

The bill makes the hours of labor forty-eight hours a week instead of sixty hours, and relieves employers from the necessity of posting on factory walls the ages of employees under the age of twenty.

A concession that labor unions have been striving for years to obtain will be made if the Sanders amendment is adopted. His bill provides that deputy factory inspectors appointed by the factory inspector must be members of organized labor bodies.

Mr. Sanders will insist upon an early hearing and a speedy report upon his bill by the General Laws Committee. Several speakers from New York labor unions will advocate the bill before the committee.

Promises the Saengerbund to Open the Great Fest in 1900.

Albany, Jan. 17.—Governor Roosevelt has agreed to open the festivities at the nineteenth national saengerfest, to be held in Brooklyn from June 30 to July 17, 1900. The Governor will also suggest legislation which will permit the Saengerfest to be held in the great hall of the Thirteenth Regiment armory, which will hold over 15,000 persons. An attendance of 20,000 a day is expected. No hall in Brooklyn except the armory would contain such an audience, and to build one would cost $50,000.
